

WINDSOR HIGH SCHOOL

To Whom It May Concern,

February 12, 2014

I have had the pleasure of serving Evelyn Cuevas as her school counselor and academic advisor for the past four years. She is a student who is intelligent, responsible, hard working, enthusiastic and respectful.

In her academics, Evelyn has shown great improvement. She started out an English learner as a freshman with GPA of 2.7. Last semester's grade point average was 3.60 and she has an overall GPA of 3.17. This is definitely on an upward trajectory and shows the necessary mastery of the English language and academic skills needed for higher education. Her Social Studies teacher, Michael Kaufman, describes her as conscientious, self disciplined and engaged. These are great attributes in a student and are reflected in her academics.

Evelyn has been involved in a variety of extracurricular activities like volunteering, work experience and participating with World Strides Program (travel and education program). Her compassion and desire to help others was reflected in her volunteer experience. There she helped facilitate an art program with students in kindergarten and first grade who had experienced domestic violence in their homes. Over last summer, Evelyn was involved with ecology projects throughout the community, working for the Center for Social and Environmental Stewardship. Those projects included habitat restoration, trail construction and flood mitigation. In the year of 2012, Evelyn entered an essay, application and interviewed with the World Strides Program and out of many applicants, she was the only student chosen from Windsor High School. During that summer, the World Strides Program sent Evelyn and 29 other students to Washington D.C. to study the origins of our country and visit all the historical sites.

Evelyn career interest is in law enforcement. She is motivated to continue with her studies to obtain a degree in higher education. Her tenacity, hard work and focus on her future will carry her far. I am confident that Evelyn will continue to excel in her academics and career goals. I recommend her enthusiastically.

Sincerely,
